Company Background

Apple Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets personal computers and related personal computing and mobile communication devices along with a variety of related software, services, peripherals, and networking solutions. Apple sells its products worldwide through its online stores, its retail stores, its direct sales forces, third-party wholesalers, and resellers.

Industry Outlook:

Led by 5G advancements, demand for wearables, and new services capabilities driving interest for next-generation devices, information technology still maintains a strong growth ever since. Though the COVID-19 pandemic hit in late first quarter in 2020, however, the IT industry still outperformed S&P 500 index and bit the most sectors in S&P 500, with an estimation over 1 billion 5G smartphone units, 10% - 15% 5-year annualized revenue growth rate and over 1.65B size of smartphone market. However, semiconductor manufacturing capacity shortage is still a big problem to the IT industry, leading to sales growth decreasing substantially.

Investment Thesis:

Apple Inc. has the safest credit rating in the information technology sector, meaning Apple Inc. can cost less when borrowing money. The information technology sector belongs to a capital-intensive industry. IT companies need lots of cash flow to support its R&D to maintain its competitiveness and attract new customers. Apple Inc. reaches the criteria I mentioned above and way larger than the industry average. Apple Inc.'s profitability also outperforms the IT industry, such as ROE, ROA, Net Income growth rate, etc. With lower than the industry average P/E ratio and dividend payout, Apple stock also provides margin of safety when stock price starts to decline. Finally, the way Apple Inc. generates its revenue has also diversified during the past five years. It's revenue from service has increased to almost one-fifth of total revenue four main different products also become more balanced.
